Create a rustic air

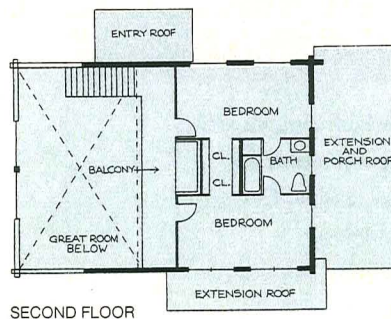

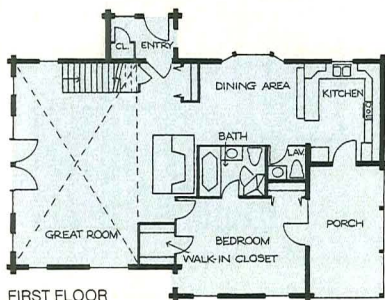

This stylish house—built from a precut kit by Real Log Homes—reproduces the storied log cabin in an elegance that our ancestors could never have imagined. Nowhere is 20th-Century—comfort more evident than in the master suite, which envelops modern features in the warmth of wood walls, exposed rafters, and expanses of field-stone. Conveniently placed on the first floor, the suite has a special amenity—access to a screened porch for lounging. Country furnishings selected by designer Kim Freeman balance the natural materials.

The cozy bedroom, above left, opens directly into the bath, above. A stone wall lends a rustic air and creates a grottolike tub area, which receives light from an interior window, opposite.
